We hope that Microsoft stays strong in the marketplace. Personally, we like their products and have no complaints about their service. I would hate to see another negative impact on the NW at this point in time. As long as there are checks and balances, I don't even mind if they control the market place because decentralization may be cumbersome and difficult to work with given the technical expertise needed to work with different systems. They would all need to be integrated. A big order, wouldn't you say?
